Southern Arizona Home Builders Association Names New Interim President

Tucson, AZ (Jan.6, 2011) – David Godlewski has been appointed Interim President of the Southern Arizona Home Builders Association (SAHBA).

Godlewski, who has served as the government liaison for SAHBA since 2008, replaces Jessica Whyde who has announced her resignation effective January 14. She was named SAHBA president in October 2009.

"Jessica has been an innovative leader at SAHBA. She moved us into the electronic age of communications and streamlined our operations. We greatly appreciate her contributions to our organization," said Charlie Bowles, Chairman of SAHBA's Board of Trustees.

"David has effectively represented SAHBA in our community. He's well respected by local and state government leaders and has the strong support of SAHBA's Executive Board of Trustees." Bowles said.

Godlewski is a member of the Town of Marana Habitat for Conservation Plan Stakeholder Working Group and the Town of Oro Valley Economic Summit Committee.

He was vice president of Sterling Corporation for nearly seven years, where he specialized in managing public affairs activities for corporations, trade associations and non profits before joining SAHBA. He is a graduate of Michigan State University.

SAHBA represents about 350 member businesses serving the residential construction industry in Pima County.
